Boris the Professional Planner says: "Lotto for Land – buy a parcel of land and play today – in the end your land will be secure in our hands"

Natasha, dearest, in prior letters Boris, from my new home, the Neo-Red Square – the New Kremlin of the South - Shelby County, Alabama, praised the "Hired Professional Planners" HPP of Shelby County. Their influence and leadership, which resulted in the official adoption of the County's Comprehensive Plan demonstrates the merit of facilitator training. Want-to-be socialist and "Sustainable Development" SD specialist don't have to travel far from the New Kremlin to attend top-notch training facilities. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, UNC is an example of a quality school with a first class SD curriculum.

A brief description from the syllabus:

"The course (Sustainable Development) will focus on the social and cultural aspects of communities that are relevant for sustainable development facilitators. Facilitators are teachers, trainers and organizers who serve as "cultivators" and "midwives" for community change." "Near the end of the semester students will present a participatory plan for engaging with the community for sustainable development work."¹

In addition to this useful socialist/sustainable training program at UNC Chapel Hill, Auburn University² located in east central Alabama has felt the desire to comply with the United Nations Agenda 21 stipulation that "clearing houses" for "sustainable development" be established at the national, regional and subregional level. "They would operate on an information-demand basis and focus on the information needs of the end-users. They would take into account the positive roles and contributions of ...business communities, trade associations, non-governmental organizations, national Governments, and newly established or strengthened national networks."³ "The clearing-houses would thus facilitate the establishment of joint ventures and partnerships of various kinds."⁴

Natasha, every year the Universities finish a new crop of graduates with the desire to socialize everything - is it any wonder the sunny south looks so RED – our favorite color. The RED stripe of control can be seen in Comprehensive Plans from Shelby County north to the municipality of Vestavia Hills and in the north border community of Athens. All have official restrictive policy statements regarding outdoor lighting. Lets look first, Natasha, at the example that I most admire from Shelby County. Section II, of the County's plan cites three times the following policy: "Promote dark sky lighting". The statement is pleasantly vague – don't you agree?

A little north of Shelby County the upper class community of Vestavia Hills explains the policy in more definitive terms:

“All light sources should be shielded to eliminate nighttime glare that could be harmful to other buildings or roadways. Light shields keep light focused downward, keeping the night time sky free from light pollution.” Appendix 4 section 3c 1 page 29

Natasha, have you ever heard anyone make the comment that “nighttime glare could be harmful to building or roadways”? At least we know that some of the graduates from the Universities are not receiving “Command and Control Socialist Training” CCST. Sure makes for easier manipulation – don’t you think?

And finally, Boris’s favorite - Athens, Alabama:

“In no case shall site or parking area lighting cast illumination beyond property boundaries” page 5-5

Researching outdoor lighting, Boris discovered that there is an “International Dark Sky Association”⁵. The Association has published an “Out Door Lighting Handbook”, with a section on residential outdoor lighting. Natasha, I am including pictures so you can show your nephews the job opportunities in the new Fatherland – “Nighttime Light Inspectors” NLI. I know it is not the prestigious “Command and Control” job that they might be use to in the homeland, but we all can’t start at the top like Boris.

The picture on the left represents an outdoors light fixture that is not authorized. The light, Natasha, scatters itself everywhere, like society – unorganized and misdirected – it just needs a little reorganization and proper direction – don’t you agree? We will design our authority to operate just like the authorized light on the right - the presence of the shade is always there, giving the light “proper direction” and when one peers beyond the shroud it is dark and foreboding.

Speaking of “foreboding”, the night is falling here in the “New Fatherland” on an unorganized society. But with optimism, Boris visualizes the promise of a “New Red Dawn” for tomorrow. You see Poopcie, Boris has a mid-afternoon appointment with the Hired Professional Planner. In my next letter, I will be able to describe to you my responsibilities as Shelby County’s “Appointed Professional Planner”.

Nitey-nite – your little Boris, the “Professional Planner”
